

Building on 150 years

A strategy for Family Action
2019-2024

Introduction

Family Action passionately believes in the strengths within families. Families may be very different in composition and circumstances but they should all be empowered and supported to enable all members to thrive. Through all that we do, Family Action is rooted in the belief that well-functioning and supported families are a driving force for happy, healthy individuals and communities.

In 2019 Family Action celebrated its 150th Anniversary. 150 years of providing practical, emotional and financial support to vulnerable children, adults and entire families. To mark that 150th Anniversary we launched the Family Monsters Project – a national conversation about the everyday pressures on families in Britain today.

Building on 150 Years, looks ahead to the next five years and builds on our previous Stronger than Ever strategy. Stronger than Ever was very much about modernisation and growth – to ensure we are able to continue to support families across the country, and indeed to reach more families with our work. Five years on, Family Action has achieved the goals of that strategy – the charity is supporting more children and families than ever before. We have modernised comprehensively, nearly doubled our turnover and increased our geographical reach. We merged with seven other charities during this five-year period, introduced a range of new services and better evidenced our impact. We won national recognition for the excellence of the support we provide to vulnerable families and as a good employer.

But now we need to look to the future again. Building on 150 Years provides a route map for what we need to do next so that we can keep building stronger families. It is designed to provide a direction of travel to guide us through uncertain times rather than a detailed list of everything we need to do. That clear direction of travel, which allows for flexibility in its execution, should serve us well in the years ahead.

If we achieve the objectives in this strategy we will not only provide high quality support to hundreds of thousands of children, adults and families, but our growing influence will also touch the lives of millions more.

Building on 150 Years will help us to achieve our potential as a charity with national impact.

The focus of our new strategy

This new strategy puts front and centre five key objectives:

1. Agile and Responsive – always able to look ahead, to innovate and to seize opportunities
2. Managed Growth - continue to grow in a managed, sustainable way so that we can support more children, adults and families to have better lives
3. Improved Quality - to ensure that our services are of the highest possible quality so that we can maximise the difference made to the people we work with
4. Better Known with a Bolder, Stronger Voice for Families – to speak out for families through building our national profile and positioning and having increased influence and impact
5. Valuing Our People - investing in our staff and volunteers and their development so that Family Action becomes an even better place to work

Why we chose these five objectives

This is a challenging time for vulnerable people. Despite the political claims that austerity is over, public money continues to be very tight and cuts to public service budgets and local services are continuing. This puts pressure on charities like Family Action that provide services to vulnerable people. The risk being carried within many of Family Action's services is inevitably increasing as statutory thresholds for intervention rise and as we take on more complex cases.

All of this is taking place against a backdrop of an increasingly digital world and an evolving profile of pressures on family life.

Against this background of financial pressures and increasing risk Family Action has achieved a great deal over the last five years. We have grown substantially, merged with a number of other organisations and developed a reputation as an organisation that can deliver with quality on a national as well as local scale. We have been careful to diversify our sources of income and our range of services in order to reduce our dependence on single areas of work or income. We have been successful in substantially increasing our fundraising income too. We have also professionalised our back office and developed considerable agility and momentum within the organisation that has enabled us to seize opportunities and cope with setbacks.

Over the next five years Family Action needs to consolidate this growth while remaining agile and resilient as our operating environment will not get any easier. We expect money to remain tight, the level of risk being carried in individual services to increase further and fundraising to be even more competitive. In this context, in order to continue to deliver for everyone we work with, we need to continue to build the quality of our back office infrastructure and our spectrum of income generation. We must also ensure that our staff and volunteers are properly supported and that every service provided by Family Action is not only of the highest quality but that we can evidence that quality.

We also need to build on the milestone of our 150th Anniversary and the early success of The Family Monsters Project. Family Action is becoming better known and has the potential to become much better known and to capitalise on that increased brand recognition to reach and support more families that need us. We want to use our increased profile to develop new partners and ultimately become a stronger voice for families.

We recognise that Family Action is very much the product of our dedicated staff and volunteers as well as our fantastic supporters. We want to invest over the next five years in the training and development of our staff and volunteers so that they are the very best that they can be and so that Family Action becomes an even better place to work.

We have shown over the past five years that it is possible for a charity to grow in a context of continuing austerity and to increase our impact too. We know that Family Action has the values, the staff, volunteers and supporters, the ideas and service models and the sheer determination to keep on making a difference to the people we serve regardless of the political and funding climate that surrounds us.

The five objectives in this strategy are not standalone – they all cut across, speak to and rely on each other. We think that inter-relatedness demonstrates the cohesiveness of this strategy and the vision that lies behind it.

In conclusion, it is imperative for us to push on and find the right way forward for Family Action. This strategy sets out a direction of travel which feels right for now, but we accept that this strategy may need to flex over the course of the next five years to respond to changes in the external environment. We will respond as needed to those changes through the detailed action plans that will support this strategy.

About Family Action

Family Action provides practical, emotional and financial support to strengthen and improve the life chances of those who are poor, disadvantaged or socially isolated. We seek to empower everyone we work with and ensure they are listened to, helping them look forward to the future and not be defined by their past.

We believe in the strengths within families. We want families to achieve their potential with increased resilience. We support parents and carers to face their family pressures. We support children and young people to face their futures with confidence. We want every family to be celebrated and championed.

Family Action's values are central to us. We are a can-do organisation, we strive for excellence, we maintain a clear people focus and we have mutual respect for everyone. We recruit against these values, appraise our staff against them and ensure that our practice is continually informed by them.

Founded in 1869, the charity was providing services to children and families before the first aeroplane flew, before the first car was invented, even before it was first made compulsory for all primary age children to attend school. Our history is remarkable - we were there at the very beginnings of social work, we created the first Citizen's Advice Bureau and the forerunners of Job Centres. Today, Family Action supports over 45,000 families and over 250,000 children a year through some 150 community-based services across England, Wales and the Isle of Man. We help many thousands more across the UK with financial assistance through our education and welfare grant programmes.

Our services include:

- help for parents-to-be
- the provision of high quality pre-schools and Children's Centres in deprived communities
- provision of the National School Breakfast Programme which feeds hundreds of thousands of children who would otherwise be too hungry to learn
- provision of holiday hunger schemes and Food Clubs to alleviate family hunger
- behaviour outreach support and emotional wellbeing services in schools
- support for young carers
- counselling/emotional health and wellbeing services for vulnerable children, young people and adults
- therapeutic work with children, young people, young adults and families
- support services for adopted children, adoptive families, adopted adults and birth families
- intensive family support provided directly in the family home for family with complex difficulties
- relationship support for couples under stress
- specialist work with domestic violence and abuse
- befriending and mentoring services for disadvantaged young people, for new mothers struggling with perinatal mental ill health and for adults with mental ill health
- financial grants programmes for individuals and families in crisis
- FamilyLine: a national helpline, text and email advice service with befriending and counselling
- Training and consultancy services
